FARM LABORER ON STAND TODAY

Oscar Calhoun, Employed at Ashland Farm Until Time of Tragedy
Testifies in Inquiry.

L. B. HARRIS CALLED AGAIN

To Bring Calhoun Here Was Mission of Mysterious Trip of Officials Yesterday.

Oscar Calhoun, the farm laborer who was employed at Ashland farm until Saturday night before the fire which destroyed the Harris home on Tuesday afternoon, March 12, and in the ruins of which the charred body of Mrs. Harris was found, and who did not move from that vicinity until Thursday following the fire, was before the grand jury most of today.

To bring Calhoun to this city was the mission of the secret trip of Deputy Prosecutor Wallace Morgan and Coroner A. G. Shauck yesterday afternoon and last night. They left here shortly after the noon hour in an automobile driven by an Arlington man, and did not arrive back in this city with Calhoun until four o'clock this morning.

That Calhoun has somewhat of a story to tell the grand jury is evidenced by the fact that he was before the grand jury all morning, and it was presumed that he would resume his testimony this afternoon.

L. B. Harris went before the grand jury this afternoon about three o'clock. This is the second time that he has testified in the grand jury quiz. The grand jury was in session until late in the afternoon.

Calhoun had been employed by L. B. Harris only a short time previous to the fire. On Saturday night previous to that Tuesday he was discharged by L. B. Harris and ordered to move off the place. He lived in a small house on the farm, a short distance back of the Harris farm house.

Although Calhoun did not work for L. B. Harris he remained in the house on the farm until two days after the fire. The day of the fire he was working on James Alexander's farm which adjoins Ashland farm. He explained his actions that day satisfactorily to the coroner evidently as he was not held close by the authorities kept in close touch with him so that he could be called before the grand jury.

The deputy prosecutor and the coroner made a trip through four counties in order to bring Calhoun back here. They had to travel through Rush, Decatur, Jennings and Jefferson counties. Calhoun was in the vicinity of Dupont on the edge of Jefferson county just over the edge from Jennings.

Calhoun was detained once during the coroner's investigation to examine some red spots on his coat. It was asserted that the spots were caused by blood, but the coroner, after looking at them, asserted that the spots were not the result of blood spattering on them. Calhoun explained to the coroner that the spots were red paint, and that he had got them on his coat while riding a box car down from Richmond to this city. The coroner accepted that explanation. It is said Calhoun's coat was exhibited before the grand jury today.

Calhoun went to the W. A. Alexander farm where he worked for a short time, after leaving the Harris farm Thursday following the fire. W. A. Alexander has already testified in the grand jury probe.

LANDS PICKPOCKET AFTER AUTO CHASE

"Uncle" John Herron of Raleigh
Comes to Grief While "Kidding"
Gypsy Fortune Teller.

STEALS $4; IT'S RECOVERED

After an exciting chase in Frank Martin's automobile late yesterday afternoon, a gypsy woman who picked the pockets of "Uncle" John Herron of Raleigh earlier in the afternoon, was caught with the band of gypsies with which she was traveling, just over the county line in Fayette county. The pickpocket was easily identified by Mr. Herron and was persuaded by him to refund the four dollars she had stolen and avoid being arrested. Mr. Herron was accompanied on his chase by Frank Martin, Charles Miles and an officer of Mays.

All Raleigh was in a turmoil when the theft was discovered. The band of wandering gypsies had invaded the town shortly after the noon hour and had attempted to make a few cents by telling fortunes. While "Uncle" John Herron was having a little sport at the expense of the gypsy fortune teller, she deftly removed the four dollars from his pocket, and the tribe had left the town before the robbery was discovered. It is recited the woman thief was minus two fingers. Sheriff Miller of Fayette county was notified of the robbery and he and his deputy set out to head off the band near Bentonville. Before they met up with the gypsies, however, the money had been recovered.

Glenwood Squire Interrupted Court
Proceedings With Remark That Sounded Like Impeachment.

TALKING ABOUT ROOSEVELT

Unusual Trial Under Novel Circumstances Was Held to Settle Neighbor's Quarrel.

A civil suit of passing interest was tried, under circumstances of novel coloring Wednesday night in the office of Robert Dora, justice of the peace of Glenwood, says the Connersville News. Justice Dora himself presided over the trial and a jury of six heard the evidence which concerned the alleged rights of Erskin Dailey to one red cow, in possession of Lou Matney, who had bought her from N. H. Bowen.

Dailey claimed to have purchased the animal himself, and sued to replevin her. Hence the action in court. Wiles & Springer of this city defended Mr. Matney, and a Rushville firm appeared for the aggressor, Mr. Dailey.

The court room is in a wing of Squire Dora's house, and is small. It was filled to the eaves to hear the trial and the temperature arose by leaps as the lawyers bent to their work.

As Attorney Springer was questioning a witness a hush fell over the room, during which the witness was trying to remember something. In the very heart of this hush Squire Dora's strong voice burst out emphatically—

"I think he's a gol-durned fool, that's what I think."

Attorney Springer was on his feet in a twinkling, thinking the witness, who was his own, was being impeached by the judge.

"Who are you speaking of, Squire?" the attorney asked in a voice with wrath.

"Why, Theodore Roosevelt?" answered the justice. Then he realized that his thoughts had wandered from the matter in hand to the great political situation, and with a smile he squared himself to attend to the case before him.

At about this time Attorney Wiles, who had smoked a ten-horse-power cigar just before the trial started, and had grown hot with its progress, was seized with an inward sickness which compelled him to halt the trial and hang his suffering head out of the window—for an unavoidable purpose—for fully five minutes.

The jury, about midnight, found for the defendant.

DEVOTION TO BOYS COST HIM HIS LIFE

Mongrel Dog Attacks People to Protect His Little Masters, Gene and Jules Kiplinger.

POLICEMAN WOLTER KILLS HIM

A stray dog that has been harbored by John H. Kiplinger, because his two little boys, Jules and Gene, refused to part with him, came to an untimely end this morning when Policeman Wolter captured the mongrel, led him to a secluded spot and killed him. The canine was devoted to his two little masters. In fact, he was so devoted that he paid his life. He would allow no one near the two little boys. They could rattle him around over the yard, put their hands in his mouth and try most any sort of a trick and he would never whimper. But should a strange person approach the boys, their life was in jeopardy.

It was his devotion for the two boys that cost his life. The other day the dog bit Jacob Schaefer on the hand making a deep wound. An aged woman, whose name was not learned by the police, was attacked by the dog and bitten on the elbow. The canine made a dash at Vernon Spurgeon, a neighbor of Kiplinger's a day or so ago, but Mr. Spurgeon managed to get out of his path.

ST. PAUL FIRE WAS INCENDIARY'S WORK

Opinion Gains Credence That Blaze of Yesterday, Causing $7,000 Loss, Was started by Fiend.

FLASHES FROM OIL IGNITION

That the fire at St. Paul, which destroyed the William Kelso general store, the John Kelso residence property and an old barn belonging to Dr. Charles Pagel, causing a loss of $7,000 at an early hour Friday morning was the work of an incendiary, the residents of the little town are fully convinced.

The fire was discovered shortly after one o'clock by Mrs. Edward King, who was awakened by the barking of her dog. Mrs. King sounded a general alarm by firing a revolver.

When the first men arrived upon the scene only a slight blaze was seen in the loft of the old barn. The fire fighters made an attempt to go to the loft, but found that the ladder had been removed. Before another ladder could be procured the fire was increased by three large spurts of flame from the upper interior of the barn.

Following these flashes, which the residents declare were caused by the ignition of oil or gasoline poured on the floor, the fire gained headway rapidly and within a very few minutes the Kelso store was afire.

PAY TRIBUTE TO JUDGE CULLEN

Few Attorneys Are Left in Rushville
Who Remember Days of Deceased Jurist.

VERY BRILLIANT ADVOCATE

Attorneys From All Parts of Indiana
Expected For Funeral Sunday Afternoon.

The Rush County Bar Association had a short meeting this morning in the court room to complete preparations for the funeral of Judge W. A. Cullen tomorrow afternoon at two-thirty o'clock. It was planned to appoint a special reception committee, but it has been decided that each local attorney shall act as a reception committee of himself and meet and entertain the visiting members of other bar associations.

It is thought that a large crowd of attorneys from other Indiana cities will be here for the funeral as Judge Cullen was well and favorably known all over the State. By reason of the fact that he served as judge of the circuit court in three counties, judge of a common pleas court having jurisdiction over three counties and was twice a member of the State legislature he gained a wide acquaintance in all parts of the Hoosier domain.

The death of Judge Cullen has called forth many favorable expressions concerning the life of the jurist and statesman. There are not many attorneys practicing at the bar in Rushville now who can remember the day when Judge Cullen was in his prime. But some few lawyers remain who recall the times when Judge Cullen was one of the ablest advocates in Indiana.

John D. Megee and Douglas Morris, former judge of this circuit court and now chief justice of the State supreme court, both recollect the early times in the judicial history of Rush county when Judge Cullen was one of the most feared of barristers by his opponents. These two attorneys paid a high tribute to Judge Cullen yesterday when they declared they considered him one of the most brilliant and capable attorneys of his day.

That he was not a close student of the law as a science, as has come to be the practice of this age, but was a brilliant advocate of subjects concerning the law, was the assertion of these two attorneys. Had he been the student of law that the schools are producing today, that coupled with his marvelous ability to argue before a jury and that keen preception which won for him many legal battles, would have made him a most powerful barrister. As it was he was remarkable for his time, and had a natural bent for pleading before the bar.

Judge Cullen's funeral will be at the late residence, corner of Fifth and Main streets. The Rev. J. B. Meacham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of which he was a ruling elder will conduct the funeral, and will be assisted by the Rev. V. W. Tevis, district superintendent of the Methodist church. The Masons, G. A. R.'s and attorneys will march in a body to the funeral.

Friends may view the remains this evening or in the morning.

SPEAKING OF ORNAMENTS.

Marion Chronicle: The Richmond Palladium says that James E. Watson could not be elected constable in Wayne county. Probably not. There are two or three editors in Wayne county whom the people could readily be led to understand would more appropriately ornament that particular job than would Mr. Watson.

Preparatory to the Campaign Which the Women of Indiana Expect to Wage Next Winter in Behalf of Their Demands For Equal Rights at the Polls, Local Organizations Are Being Perfected in Every County.

Indianapolis, May 4.—In order that the agitation for the bill granting full suffrage to women which will be presented at the next session of the state legislature may be carried on in an effective way, the Woman's Franchise League of Indiana is perfecting a state organization. Chairmen are being appointed by the league in each county, and these county chairmen will unite in appointing district chairmen. These chairmen will be called on to meet in Indianapolis on the occasion of the next Republican state convention, when the women will make an effort to have the Republicans embody a suffrage plank in their state platform. There will also be a campaign for membership conducted by the league throughout the state. The following have been appointed members of the state organization committee: Mrs. R. Harry Miller, chairman; Miss Harriet Noble and Mrs. R. C. Bennett. Several capable women speakers will talk on subjects vital to suffrage at a meeting of the association in this city May 10.

CREATED BAD BLOOD

Rival Gypsy Chiefs Clash but Finally Adjust Differences.

Lafayette, Ind., May 4.—A tragedy was narrowly averted in rival gypsy camps south of Lafayette when John Henderson, the leader of a band of Russian gypsies, attempted with a revolver to force Adam Stanley of the other tribe, who had married Henderson's daughter a few days ago, to give the girl up or pay him $100. The two gypsy bands arrived together a few days ago. There had been bad blood between them ever since Stanley married the girl.

Henderson went to a justice of the peace and asked for an affidavit charging Stanley with abduction. Stanley, however, had an affidavit filed against Henderson charging him with attempt to kill. The affair was finally adjusted and the two gypsy tribes left for the east.

AROUSED SUSPICION

This Man Told Conflicting Stories to Account For Wound.

Princeton, Ind., May 4.—Telling conflicting stories, first saying a bullet wound across his cheek was made by a chicken thief that he encountered at night at his farm home a quarter of a mile from the scene of the mysterious murder of Harry Murphy, the Southern railway detective, and later saying he made the mark with a file to pose as the hero of an encounter with a thief, Murray Duncan, aged twenty, is under arrest here pending an investigation to determine whether he can throw light on the murder. Two Georgetown youths reached home from a hobo trip to Huntington, fifty miles away. They were arrested as suspects four times within the fifty miles.

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

By Common Garden Sage a
Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using Sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers had dark, glossy hair at seventy-five, while our mothers are gray before they are fifty. Our grandmothers kept their hair soft and glossy with a "Sage Tea," which also restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it. This objection has been overcome by the Wyeth Chemical Company of New York, who has placed on the market a superior preparation of Sage, combined with Sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp, and thin, weak, falling hair.

The beauty of the hair depends more on its rich, even shading than anything else. Don't have dry, harsh faded hair, when a simple, harmless remedy will bring back the color in a few days; and don't be tormented with dandruff, itching scalp and loose, falling hairs. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will quickly correct these troubles, and give color, strength and beauty to your hair.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today, and prove this to your own satisfaction. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

STRIKE TIES UP CHICAGO PAPERS

Stereotypers Voted to Break Their Contract.

JOINED STRIKING PRESSMEN

Decision Affecting Both the Morning and Afternoon Runs of Chicago Dailies Was Taken at the Close of One of the Most Turbulent Meetings in the History of Union Labor in the Windy City.

Chicago, May 4.—After one of the most turbulent meetings in the history of union labor in Chicago, stereotypers employed on the morning and evening papers in Chicago last night voted to break the contract they made three days ago and to join the striking pressmen and wagon drivers.

There were no papers on the news-stands and on the streets of Chicago today. The four morning papers were making good progress in getting out a paper with non-union pressmen, but at 11 o'clock last night the stereotypers employed on all the morning papers struck, refusing to work with non-union pressmen.

Brutal assaults on newsboys who tried to sell their papers on street corners in the loop, marked the progress of the newspaper strike.

TRYING IT OUT

British Merchants Finding the New "Shop Act" Full of Difficulties.

London, May 4.—A new experience in paternal government was begun May 1 by British shopkeepers. The "shops act of 1912" became operative on that day, and henceforth every employer included in its schedules will be compelled under penalties to grant his employees a weekly half-holiday and a definite period for their meals.

Under the provisions of the act most shops must henceforth be closed absolutely at 1:30 p. m., one day in the week, but exceptions in this respect are allowed in certain trades, such as saloons, restaurants, butchers and other dealers in perishable goods, as well as to the accountants, drug stores and newspaper vendors. These trades must nevertheless arrange for every employee to have the benefit of the act individually.

Three days of its working has sufficed to show that the details must be revised. The act inflicts inconvenience and even hardship in some cases. One of the chief difficulties in connection with restaurants is a compulsory forty-five minutes for waiters' meals which comes at the busiest period of the day. The waiters and waitresses also complain that the half holiday deprives them of a valuable proportion of their tips which in many cases form their sole earnings.

DARING ROBBERY

Is Laid at the Door of Prominent Citizen of Allentown.

New York, May 4.—On charges of grand larceny and being a fugitive from justice, William P. Saeger, member of a rich and influential family of Allentown, Pa., will appear for examination Sunday in Center street court. He was arrested in this city following the investigation of an exceedingly daring robbery in Allentown a week ago, when dynamite blew open a safe in the offices of the Saeger Milling company and seized securities valued at $60,000. Near the shattered safe was found a bag filled with sufficient dynamite to have wrecked the company's plant.

Saeger has made his home in and around New York at intervals for some years. Saeger's wife is a niece of former Mayor Charles F. Warwick of Philadelphia. The couple, who have two children, have been separated for some time.

Feared Her Husband.

Memphis, Tenn., May 4.—That Mrs. Olive D. Corgill shot and killed her husband, Bailey T. Corgill, because she feared Corgill would kill her and their children, is asserted in a statement made by J. F. Rees, father of the woman. Mrs. Corgill is under arrest.

Has Aroused Conjectures.

Tokio, May 4.—In view of the present conflict between the Chinese and Tibetans, there is considerable speculation here as to the significance of the Dalai Lama's gift of a golden image of Buddha to the mikado.

Mrs. J. M. Hinshaw, 235 So. 14th St., Richmond had a severe pain in her back and other indications of kidney trouble. She heard of the curative qualities of Foley Kidney Pills and took them. She says: "I was entirely relieved from the back-ache, my kidney action improved and I am now all over my trouble. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills." F. B. Johnson & Co.

Slovenly Voting.

Some queer illustrations of careless habits of voting were given in the hotly contested Massachusetts primary.

A candidate for district delegate called a bunch of his friends into his office, all intelligent men, and asked them to see if they could mark a ballot correctly for Taft. Only one of them marked it right.

The throwing out of some 12,000 ballots in which nine delegates were marked when the ballot said in large type "Vote for eight," illustrated the slipshod way in which many voters always perform their act. It is a general rule that the total vote under the Australian system falls off from 15 to 25 per cent from the head of the ticket to its tail. Often the local contests at the foot of the ballot come a good deal closer to our homes and our hearts than do the fight between the higher-ups at the head of the ticket.

Tammany always puts its ignorant hosts to school, so that they can mark a complicated ballot with accuracy and dispatch. It's the business man, who is used to having his papers edited by a stenographer, that gets tangled when he is up against them unaided.

REGISTRATION DAYS.

The following are the three registration days under the law enacted by the 1911 legislature:

- Thursday, May 9, 180 days before election day, Tuesday, November 5.
- Friday, September 6, 60 days before election day.
- Monday, October 7, 29 days before election day.

in every election precinct in Rush county. No voter should forget that it is his duty to register. The registration law is in the interest of clean politics, honest elections and good government. Citizens who desire these results should not fail to register. Although it may in some cases involve inconvenience to do so, good citizens will not complain of that. The fight to vote means having a part in the government; it means power to change bad conditions, where they exist, into good conditions. In a despotism the people have no voice. And there is no surer road to despotism than the failure of men to use the power which the ballot puts into their hands. Illegal voting will be prevented by the registration law and the ballot of the legal voter will be given its proper strength. Therefore, regardless of any inconvenience to which you may be subjected—register. May 9 is the day to do so.

Committees representing the city council of Connersville have been investigating a number of localities where cement paving for the streets and country roads has been used. They have been pleased with what they have learned, and recommend the cement paving for all places except city streets, where traffic is constant and extra heavy.

As a material for all residence streets and country roads, they say it can not be beat for cheapness and durability. A roadway 16 feet wide would cost about $8,000 a mile, but it would be permanent, and that will be in the future of main roads in the country.

With the advent of cement paving at 80 cents to a $1 a square yard, it looks like the question of good roads was near a solution, at least for the main thoroughfares between towns and cities.

Many people believe that it will not be many years until all the principal country roads are paved, although this is not likely to be done until different road laws are enacted.

Although we saw a dark haired olive skinned man on the streets of this city the other day, we decline to believe the report that the Japs are trying to establish a military station in our suburbs.

The picture men secured good films of the killing of the Paris bandits. A good industrious and enterprising burglar has talents that would make him a success in the moving picture business.

They are trying to put the consular service on the merit system. The proper basis of course will be the number of delegates captured for successful politicians.

Judge Blair Appoints Three to Assess Value of School House Site in Center Township.

CONDEMNED BY AGREEMENT

Just before leaving for Shelbyville this afternoon Judge Blair appointed John W. Davis of Rushville, William Booth of Rushville and Dr. Oliver W. Righter of Carthage to assess damages in the condemnation proceedings of the Center school township, by Chester D. Rhodes, trustee, against Samuel Cohee, which was filed a week ago Wednesday.

The trustee wants land owned by the defendant condemned so that he can build a school house there. By the agreement of both parties the land was condemned, and it is now only a question of valuation. The law prescribed the appraisers shall be from the same township in which the land is located, but it was agreed they might be named from any place in the county.

Today was the next to the last day for paying the spring installment of taxes. Although the clerks in the treasurer's offices were busy today they did not have as big a rush as is generally experienced the last Saturday of the taxpaying season. A number of people have sent their tax money through the mail this season which has served to lessen the rush at the office. The good weather of today kept many farmers at work on their farms.

The sight he saw would have been horrid to a healthy mind, but it only moved this man to increased and uncontrollable merriment. The two rails below leading to the stem had arisen before him in a shadowy triangle, and within it were the deck fittings he had mentioned. The windlass had become a thing of horror, black and forbidding. The two end barrels were the bulging, lightless eyes of a nondescript monster, for which the cable chains had multiplied themselves into innumerable legs and tentacles. And this thing was crawling around within the triangle. The anchor davits were many bearded serpents which danced on their tails, and the anchors themselves writhed and squirmed in the shape of immense hairy caterpillars, while faces appeared on the two white lantern towers, grinning and leering at him. With his hands on the bridge rail and tears streaming down his face, he laughed at the strange sight, but did not speak, and the three, who had quietly approached, drew back to await, while below on the promenade deck the little white figure, as though attracted by his laughter, turned into the stairway leading to the upper deck.

The phantasmagoria faded to a blank wall of gray fog, and Rowland found sanity to mutter, "They've drugged me," but in an instant he stood in the darkness of a garden, one that he had known. In the distance were the lights of a house, and close to him was a young girl, who turned from him and fled, even as he called to her.

By a supreme effort of will he brought himself back to the present, to the bridge he stood upon and to his duty. "Why must it haunt me through the years," he groaned, "drunk then, drunk since? She could have saved me, but she chose to damn me." He strove to pace up and down, but staggered and clung to the rail, while the three watchers approached again, and the little white figure below climbed the upper bridge steps.

"The survival of the fittest," he rambled as he stared into the fog—"cause and effect. It explains the universe—and me." He lifted his hand and spoke loudly, as though to some unseen familiar of the deep. "What will be the last effect? Where in the scheme of ultimate balance, under the law of the correlation of energy, will my wasted wealth of love be gathered and weighed and credited? What will balance it, and where will I be? Myra, Myra," he called, "do you know what you have lost? Do you know, in your goodness and purity and truth, of what you have done? Do you know?"

The fabric on which he stood was gone, and he seemed to be poised on nothing in a worldless universe of gray—alone. And in the vast, limitless emptiness there was no sound or life or change and in his heart neither fear nor wonder nor emotion of any kind save one, the unspeakable hunger of a love that had failed. Yet it seemed that he was not John Rowland, but some one or something else, for presently he saw himself far away, millions of billions of miles, as though on the outermost fringes of the void, and heard his own voice calling. Faintly, yet distinctly, filled with the concentrated despair of his life, came the call, "Myra, Myra!"

There was an answering call, and, looking for the second voice, he beheld her—the woman of his love—on the opposite edge of space, and her eyes held the tenderness and her voice held the pleading that he had known but in dreams. "Come back!" she called. "Come back to me!" But it seemed that the two could not understand, for again he heard the despairing cry, "Myra, Myra, where are you?" and again the answer: "Come back! Come." Then in the far distance to the right appeared a faint point of flame, which grew larger. It was approaching, and he dispassionately viewed it, and when he looked again for the two they were gone, and in their places were two clouds of nebula, which resolved into myriad points of sparkling light and color—whirling, encroaching, until they filled all space. And through them the larger light was coming—and growing larger—straight for him.

He heard a rushing sound and, looking for it, saw in the opposite direction a formless object as much darker than the gray of the void as the flame was brighter, and it, too, was growing larger and coming. And it seemed to him that this light and darkness were the good and evil of his life, and he watched to see which would reach him first, but felt no surprise or regret when he saw that the darkness was nearest. It came closer and closer until it brushed him on the side.

"What have we here, Rowland?" said a voice. Instantly the whirling points were blotted out, the universe of gray changed to the fog, the flame of light to the moon rising above it and the shapeless darkness to the form of the first officer. The little white figure, which had just darted past the three watchers, stood at his feet. As though warned by an inner subconsciousness of danger, it had come in its sleep for safety and care to its mother's old lover—the strong and the weak, the degraded and disgraced, but exalted; the persecuted, drugged and all but helpless John Rowland.

With the readiness with which a man who dozes while standing will answer the question that awakens him he said, though he stammered from the now waning effect of the drug, "Myra's child, sir; it's asleep." He picked up the nightgown little girl, who screamed as she awakened, and folded his peajacket around the cold little body.

"Who is Myra?" asked the officer in a bullying tone, in which were much chagrin and disappointment. "You've been asleep yourself."

Before Rowland could reply a shout from the crow's nest split the air.

"Ice!" yelled the lookout. "Ice ahead! Iceberg! Right under the bows!" The first officer ran amidships, and the captain, who had remained there, sprang to the engine room telegraph, and this time the lever was turned. But in five seconds the bow of the Titan began to lift, and ahead and on either hand could be seen through the fog a field of ice, which arose in an incline to a hundred feet high in her track. The music in the theater ceased, and among the babel of shouts and cries and the deafening noise of steel scraping and crashing over ice Rowland heard the agonized voice of a woman crying from the bridge steps: "Myra, Myra, where are you? Come back."

CHAPTER IV.

The Titan and the Iceberg.

FORTY-FIVE thousand tons, dead weight, rushing through the fog at the rate of fifty feet a second, had hurled itself at an iceberg. Had the impact been received by a perpendicular wall the elastic resistance of bending plates and frame would have overcome the momentum with no more damage to the passengers than a severe shaking up and to the ship than the crushing in of her bows and the killing, to a man, of the watch below. She would have backed up, and, slightly down by the head, finished the voyage at reduced speed, to rebuild on insurance money and benefit largely in the end by the consequent advertising of her indestructibility. But a low beach, possibly formed by the recent overturning of the berg, received the Titan, and with her keel cutting the ice like the steel runner of an iceboat and her great weight resting on the starboard bilge she rose out of the sea, higher and higher, until the propellers in the stern were half exposed, then, meeting an easy, spirit rise in the ice under her port bow, she heeled, overbalanced and crashed down on her side to starboard.

The bolting down bolts of twelve boilers and three triple expansion engines, unintended to hold such weights from a perpendicular flooring, snapped, and down through a maze of ladders, grating and fore and aft bulkheads came these giant masses of steel and iron, puncturing the sides of the ship, even where backed by solid, resisting ice, and filling the engine and boiler rooms with scalding steam, which brought a quick though tortured death to each of the hundred men on duty in the engineer's department.

Amid the terrifying roar of escaping steam and the bee-like buzzing of nearly 3,000 human voices, raised in agonized screams and callings from within the inclosing walls, and the whistling of air through hundreds of open deadlights as the water, entering the holes of the crushed and riven starboard side, expelled it, the Titan moved slowly backward and launched herself into the sea, where she floated

GERM LADEN DUST CAUSES CATARRH

Ely's Cream Balm Kills the Deadly Catarrh Germs. No Stomach Dosing.

Catarrh, which is bad enough in itself, often results in loss of taste, smell and hearing, and leads to serious throat and lung troubles if not promptly checked. The seat of catarrh is usually in the back of the nose, and its natural course is downward, into the throat and thence to the lungs.

Don't take any chances. If you have any symptoms of catarrh—stuffed up feeling in the head, nasty discharge from the nose, sore throat, or dry, hacking cough, get a fifty-cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and begin the treatment at once.

This remedy is not a "burning out" or "drying up" process. It is simply a cleansing, healing, antiseptic Balm, taken through the nostrils back into the head and throat where it instantly reaches the seat of the trouble. That's the only way to effectually and permanently cure catarrh.

Catarrh makes you offensive to yourself and friends. Start using Ely's Cream Balm today, and in a short time you will be permanently cured of this nasty, disgusting disease. Hargrove & Mullin, special agents.

low on her side—a dying monster, groaning with her death wound.

A solid, pyramid-like hummock of ice, left to starboard as the steamer ascended, and which projected close alongside the upper or boat deck as she fell over, had caught in succession every pair of davits to starboard, bending and wrenching them, smashing boats and snapping tackles and gripes, until, as the ship cleared herself, it capped the pile of wreckage strewn the ice in front of and around it with the end and broken stanchions of the bridge. And in this shattered, box-like structure, dazed by the sweeping fall through an arc of seventy foot radius, crouched Rowland, bleeding from a cut in his head and still holding to his breast the little girl, now too frightened to cry.

By an effort of will he aroused himself and looked. To his eyesight, twisted and fixed to a shorter focus by the drug he had taken, the steamship was little more than a blotch on the moon whitened fog, yet he thought he could see men clambering and working on the upper davits, and the nearest boat—No. 24—seemed to be swinging by the tackles. Then the fog shut her out, though her position was still indicated by the roaring of steam from her iron lungs. This ceased in time, leaving behind it the horrid humming sound and whistling of air, and when this, too, was suddenly hushed and the ensuing silence broken by dull, booming reports, as from bursting compartments, Rowland knew that the holocaust was complete; that the invincible Titan, with nearly all of her people, unable to climb vertical floors and ceilings, was beneath the surface of the sea.

Mechanically his benumbed faculties had received and recorded the impressions of the last few moments. He could not comprehend to the full the horror of it all. Yet his mind was keenly alive to the peril of the woman whose appealing voice he had heard and recognized—the woman of his dream and the mother of the child in his arms. He hastily examined the wreckage. Not a boat was intact. Creeping down to the water's edge, he halted, with all the power of his weak voice, to possible but invisible boats beyond the fog, calling to them to come and save the child, to look out for a woman who had been on deck, under the bridge. He shouted this woman's name—the one that he knew—encouraging her to swim, to tread water, to float on wreckage and to answer him until he came to her. There was no response, and when his voice had grown hoarse and futile and his feet numb from the cold of the thawing ice, he returned to the wreckage, weighed down and all but crushed by the blackest desolation that had so far come into his unhappy life. The little girl was crying and he tried to soothe her.

"I want mamma!" she wailed. "Hush, baby, hush," he answered wearily and bitterly. "So do I—more than heaven. But I think our chances are about even now. Are you cold, little one? We'll go inside and I'll make a house for us."

He removed his coat, tenderly wrapped the little figure in it, and with the injunction, "Don't be afraid, now," placed her in the corner of the bridge, which rested on its forward side. As he did so the bottle of whisky fell out of the pocket. It seemed an age since he had found it there, and it required a strong effort of reasoning before he remembered its full significance. Then he raised it to his lips and drank the incline of ice, but stopped himself.

"I'll keep it," he muttered. "It may be safe in small quantities, and we'll need it on this ice." He placed it in a corner; then, removing the canvas cover from one of the wrecked boats, he hung it over the open side and end of the bridge, crawled within and donned his coat—a ready-made, slop chest garment designed for a larger man—and, buttoning it around himself and the little girl, lay down on the hard woodwork. She was still crying, but soon, under the influence of the warmth of his body, ceased and went to sleep.

Huddled in a corner, he gave himself up to the torment of his thoughts. Two pictures alternately crowded his mind—one that of the woman of his dream entreating him to come back, which his memory clung to as an oracle; the other of this woman cold and lifeless fathoms deep in the sea. He pondered on her chances. She was close to or on the bridge steps. The boat, 24, which he was almost sure was being cleared away as he looked, would swing close to her as it descended. She could climb in and be saved unless the swimmers from doors and hatches should swamp the boat. And in his agony of mind he cursed these swimmers, preferring to see her mentally the only passenger in the boat, with the watch on deck to pull her to safety.

The potent drug he had taken was still at work, and this, with the musical swash of the sea on the icy beach and the muffled creaking and crackling beneath and around him—the voice of the iceberg—overcame him finally, and he slept to waken at daylight with limbs stiffened and numb—almost frozen.

MORE LEVEES ARE BREAKING

Louisiana Flood Situation Becoming Desperate.

NOW FIGHTING WITHOUT HOPE

Workers Along the Crumbling Levees Are Disheartened and Even the Government Engineers Who Are Directing Battle Against Swelling Tide, Can Give Almost No Word of Encouragement.

New Orleans, May 4.—The situation along the Mississippi river in Louisiana from the Arkansas line to the gulf, is desperate. Despite the feverish struggle with the swollen river, there is a general feeling of gloom throughout the state. Yesterday there was but one serious break, but it is conceded that other and very important crevasses are but a few hours off. A report that the great Morgansea dyke had gone out, with heavy life loss, as carried in press dispatches and heralded in extra editions, caused consternation, although it proved erroneous. The highest earth dam in the country still holds, but workers there are disheartened and even the federal engineers can give almost no word of encouragement. The people of the vicinity have been warned to prepare for the worst and rescue steps have been taken.
The break yesterday was at Bayou Sara, a town of 700 people. This and St. Francisville, just beyond, with a population of 800, are under water from ten to fifteen feet deep. The people all escaped.
Hard rains have fallen throughout the state, adding to the depression of the populace and further weakening the levees. The people of New Orleans are thoroughly awakened to the gravity of conditions. Several of the city dykes are in a precarious condition, and a break would not be a surprise at any time. The situation in the sugar country continues very grave. Waters from the Torras break are creeping south more slowly than was expected, but nevertheless are engulfing villages and rich plantations.
The loss will run up into the millions of dollars. The sugar cane, cotton, rice and corn crops, which were well advanced, will be a total loss before the flood has completed its destructive work. In addition to the crops, the loss of livestock will be very heavy. Torras is cut off from wire communication, the water having buried the cross arms on which the telegraph wires are strung. No loss of life has been reported from any point in the flooded area, but many stories of thrilling escapes are coming in.

Anthracite Miners Not Favorable to Peace Terms.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 4.—It was freely predicted by the rank and file, when the news reached here that the district leaders had decided to put the peace terms offered by the operators up to the miners in convention, that a flat 10 per cent increase and a modified form of recognition is not sufficient to send the men back to work.
The miners are set in their opinions that they have not been properly cared for and that a four-year agreement is entirely too long a time to work with the slight concessions offered them.
There is dissension in the ranks of the men and the convention, which is to be held here May 14, will find the delegates of nearly all the local unions instructed to go in the fight against the ratification of the peace offering.

REBELS WIN

This is the Gist of Brief Dispatch From General Campa.

El Paso, Tex., May 4.—That there has been fighting between the rebels and federals somewhere north of Torreon and south of Jiminez, is established, but Mexican official dispatches are enigmas.
The rebel officials in Juarez have received the following message, dated Rellano, state of Chihuahua:
"Complete triumph on the part of our valiant companions in persecution of the federal forces. We have enjoyed a victory over the federals—Gen. E. P. Campa."
The message does not say where the fight occurred or how many men were engaged, but the rebels in Juarez are celebrating.
